There was a cinema in Magdalen Street which catered for children Saturday afternoons I was about 13 yrs old and 6 of us would go later on the cinema was altered and was called 'The Mayfair' I used to go there after I started work at 14. I had the picture show magazine from an older girl at work every week. The first talking picture I saw was old Johnson at the Haymarket, the first musical was at the Regent. I can not remember the stars the song they were singing was (batten up your overcoat) at the Regent you saw one picture, then you were entertain with an act on the ~~stage~~ stage. We only went to the Electric when we were unable to get in the Regent. The Hippodrome was turned into a cinema they had some good films I remember two good films I saw at the Theatre de la Scala. All quite on the western front (a comedy) & Barbed wire a war picture with Elinor Brooks & Pold niere you saw one picture and a picture with the three stooges you always got them through moving the last picture. I saw at the Carlton was 1938 with Marlon Brando; I still went to the pictures afternoons you got in cheaper with a pension book until 1943 when my husband retired, but I still watch most of the films on G.V.

Yours sincerely

Mrs E. Bullum.
